One Year On

In ‘A Journal of the Plague Year’, Daniel Defoe wrote, among many other things, about “stories of generosity and courage and self-sacrifice.” While our experience of Covid-19 is not to be compared to the impact of the bubonic plague in the 17th century, it has been a shared and lengthy nightmare during which the positive qualities to which Defoe referred have been much in evidence.

I want to begin this short message by offering my thanks to those in the College community—students, academic and non-academic staff, and alumni—who have shown an outstanding commitment to the welfare of others during this past year. They know who they are and they should be very proud of what they’ve achieved.

What none of us has yet been able to observe or create is an unambiguous path back to normality. Looking ahead to Trinity Term, we can be confident that, as it proceeds, we will have many more of our students living in Oxford, even though the University’s residence requirements will remain suspended. Their experience will, however, continue to be constrained in a whole variety of ways. To take just one example, it is planned that the vast majority of examinations this summer will be online.

Looking ahead to Michaelmas, it does seem much more plausible to expect that we shall be fully “Restored to life and power and thought”, to quote from John Keble’s famous poem. But that does not necessarily mean that every aspect of College life will resume in exactly its previous form. By way of illustration, one feature of this academic year which worked better than many predicted was the interviewing of undergraduate applicants online rather than face to face. Whether the University chooses to revert to the old system, make permanent last year’s radical change, or adopt a mixed approach remains very much under discussion.

From a personal perspective, you may imagine that I very much hope that many aspects of College life will return in recognisable shape. The forthcoming academic year will be my twelfth and final one as Warden. It’s not yet time to offer a valedictory comment, but by this time in 2022 I would very much like to be describing a year in which student life is once again vibrant and some of our best traditions and events have been properly restored, making maximum possible use of the wonderful facilities we have both in our magnificent Butterfield heritage and in our modern buildings, including the H B Allen Centre.

Slán abhaile!

I’m sure many alumni, Keble colleagues past and present, Fellows, and students will join me in wishing Camilla Matterson a very fond farewell as she leaves the College after 16 years. Camilla has decided to retire for family reasons and will leave full-time employment with the College from April. She will still be supporting the work of the Alumni and Development Office on a consultancy basis for a couple of days a week until the end of July.

Camilla joined the team as Senior Development Officer in 2005 and was the clear choice for the newly created post of Deputy Director in 2009. In the years since, she has embraced many significant challenges, including multiple telethons and digital campaigns, the migration of the database, the demands of GDPR legislation, major gift fundraising for the anniversary campaign, as well as leading on legacy giving with the introduction of the Douglas Price Society, and the Talbot Fund innovations including the creation of the Talbot Society, the dinosaur pins and the now legendary foam bricks! The successful growth of the Talbot Fund and the dedication of our wonderful Year Group Reps is testament to Camilla’s infectious enthusiasm and determination to always do better. She has been dedicated to supporting the College events programme for alumni and donors; always ready to engage in warm conversation, enjoy a glass or two, and often be the last to leave.

Camilla has been a tremendously supportive colleague and I cannot thank her enough for her personal support and friendship. She will be greatly missed. Sláinte!

All Change in the Library

At the end of 2020, Keble College bade farewell to three valued members of the Library team: Librarian Yvonne Murphy, who had been with the College for nearly 12 years, Deputy Librarian Gillian Beattie and Archivist & Records Manager Faye McLeod.

The College would like to welcome the following new members of staff.

Fiona Wilson joins Keble following several posts at other libraries, including All Souls and Balliol. She is focusing on making sure Keble students have the resources they need for studying at home or in College, and is also happy to assist with any enquiries about the library and its special collections.

Peter Monteith joins as Archivist & Records Manager. Before coming to Keble, Peter worked in various archives, including King’s College, Cambridge.

Peter welcomes enquiries on the history of the College and its members, as well as the Oxford Movement.

The World Before Us

50,000 years ago, the world was populated by multiple human species, including the Neanderthals, Homo floresiensis, and the Denisovans. In his latest book, Keble Fellow Professor Tom Higham uses the latest scientific and technological advances to challenge the theory that art and complex cognitive thought were exclusive to Homo sapiens, instead painting a picture of a world where human species interbred and exchanged ideas throughout the millennia during which they coexisted.

New Honorary Fellows

Keble welcomed two alumni to Honorary Fellowships in Hilary.

Andreas Michaelis (1987), German Ambassador to the Court of St James, completed his BA and M.Litt in Philosophy at Keble. His diplomatic career has included posts as Ambassador to Israel and Singapore.

Roger Boden (1965) was Bursar of Keble for 20 years, retiring at the end of 2020. Having read PPE at Keble, he returned in 1993 to establish the College’s Development Office, before taking up the Bursarship in 2000.
In the wake of the Government’s announcement of a third lockdown and the uncertainty surrounding Hilary Term, I wanted to have a project to which people could contribute regardless of where they happened to be. The theme ‘Finding Light’ reflected the gradual lengthening of the days, as well as the chance to look for signs of hope in dark times. I was moved by the enthusiasm and skill shown by members of the College community, and hope that you enjoy the fruits of their creativity and insight.

‘Finding Light’ is available to explore online until 15 April.

Student Outreach During the Pandemic

Keble at Large (Kal) is a student-led Outreach society set up to bust myths about Oxford, encourage people from underrepresented backgrounds to apply, and offer these students practical advice for admissions. In a normal year, this would involve our student volunteers facilitating school tours and workshops for state school students, usually in our link region of Birmingham and the West Midlands, but this academic year has been a very different one.

Due to the ongoing pandemic and government restrictions, all of the work Kal has done has been online. Via our Instagram (which has over 1,500 followers), students have done takeovers, giving insight into what life is like on their degree and answering any questions that prospective applicants may have. We have also continued with our “Humans of Keble” posts each week, with current students sharing the story of their journey to Keble, as well as creating and posting weekly infographics with advice for the admissions process and dispelling common misconceptions.

This year we have also set up a Kal Blog with comprehensive subject guides written by student volunteers. So far, we have a mixture of STEM, Humanities and Social Sciences, with new subject guides being posted each week.

For the 2020 Admissions cycle, the Kal team produced videos with students about their interview experiences giving invaluable insight that will be useful to students for years to come. These were posted on our brand new Keble Outreach YouTube Channel. Looking to the future, the Kal team also intend to host virtual events to make up for the fact that the usual school visits and workshops have not been able to take place.

Flying the Flag

In celebration of LGBTQ+ History Month in the UK, we fly the Pride flag above the Lodge every February. The flag is a little different from last year; our JCR and MCR voted to fly this 8-stripe flag last Trinity. This flag originated in Philadelphia in 2017, introduced in the More Color, More Pride campaign by Amber Hikes and her team. It was originally introduced as a response to the racism that was and still is seen within the LGBTQ+ community in Philadelphia, but has been adopted around the world amidst increasing recognition that this is a conversation that absolutely needs to be had. A YouGov poll in 2018 found that 51% of LGBTQ+ people of colour had faced discrimination or poor treatment from the wider LBGTQ+ community. In Amber’s own words, “This 8-stripe flag is not a replacement [for the 6-stripe flag]... Instead it is a way to symbolise, to highlight, and to stand in solidarity with these other identities.”

The Owen Travelling Scholarship

In Michaelmas term 2020, the Keble Association awarded me the Owen Travelling Scholarship for my research stay at the British School at Athens (BSA) in Knossos (Crete). The stay in Knossos was vital to ground my theory of style as transgenerational memory, which I am currently developing as part of my DPhil in (cognitive) archaeology supervised by Dr Lambros Malafouris.

During my stay in Knossos, I gathered data on 800 decorated pots, 150 elementary gestures, 327 motifs, and 370 compositions accumulated and aggregated by Minoan potters over a timespan of circa 500 years (ca 2100-1500 BCE). The materials analysed were scattered over more than 180 boxes of artefacts, all excavated by Sir Arthur Evans and Duncan Mackenzie at the time of the discovery of the legendary Palace of King Minos in the early 20th century.

But it was not all just about pots. Discussions and exchange of ideas with other scholars were also part of my stay in Knossos. The outcome was a formal invite to teach at the BSA and join the direction of future excavations in King Minos’s Palace at Knossos. A unique opportunity made real thanks to the incredible support of Keble and the Owen Travelling Scholarship.

The work of two Keble students was recognised by the Royal Geographical Society through their 2020 Research Group Dissertation Prizes. The prizes are awarded for outstanding dissertations from undergraduate and postgraduate students at higher education institutions in the UK and overseas.

Jemima Richardson-Jones (2017) was Highly Commended by the Health and Wellbeing Research Group for her dissertation, “The magic of music: relocation and the creation of spaces of wellbeing in a residential care home”, which explored the value of musical listening for the mental and physical wellbeing of elderly people.

Eliza Norris (2017) was awarded the Political Geography Research Group undergraduate dissertation prize for her dissertation, “Rehabilitating the “artery of life”: survival, resilience and medical care in the underground hospital”, which examined underground hospitals in Syria and Israel.

Keble doctoral student David Crowhurst (DPhil 2012), the current Radcliffe Meteorological Observer, made the news in October 2020, when he recorded the wettest month in Oxford since 1875, with 185.3mm of rainfall. He also recorded 60.0 mm of rainfall on 3 October, which was the wettest October day on record, the sixth wettest day from over 70,000 in the record, and the wettest day in Oxford in 47 years.

The Radcliffe Meteorological Station at the University of Oxford holds the longest running record of rainfall and temperature data in the UK, with daily records going back to 1815.
New Year Honour

Our congratulations to Jonathan Britton (Engineering 1973), whose achievements have been recognised in the 2021 New Year Honours list with an OBE for services to Small Business Finance.

Jonathan has over 35 years’ experience in banking, and is currently Non-Executive Director at The British Business Bank.

Clubland’s Hidden Treasures
Sam Aldred (2006) tackles questions such as “Who gave the Caledonian Club a snuff box made from a taxidermied ram’s head?” in his thoroughly amusing Clubland’s Hidden Treasures, a book about the extraordinary collection of art and artefacts inside Britain’s clubs, and the remarkable stories behind them.

A Short History of the World According to Sheep
In her latest book, Sally Coulthard (1994) takes us on a fascinating journey through the history of sheep, from Mesopotamia to medieval England, to the present day. Full of engaging anecdotes and remarkable ovine facts, the book highlights how central sheep have been to the human story.

Fresh Faces at the KA

The Keble Association (KA) has been boosted by a surge of additional Trustees. Seven new volunteers have joined the Trustees’ Committee, including four who matriculated in the last 15 years. Among them is Alessandra Martorana, who as a student was awarded KA grants on three separate occasions and who will now sit on the Grants Sub-Committee. Former JCR president Sam Edwards, who also received a grant and is now starting to train as a solicitor, is also joining. KA President Jeremy Mooney comments: “This injection of fresh talent brings the Trustees back up to full strength. It means the Association can draw on wider perspectives and additional expertise as we work to support students and the College in what is proving to be a tremendously difficult time”.

KA AGM: 5.30 pm 9 September, online.

The Taimaka Project

While at Keble, with the help of two travel grants from the Keble Association, Parth Ahya (Phil and Theol 2017) founded the Taimaka Project, which delivers post-harvest credit and improved storage bags to smallholder farmers to help them store, save, and sell their crops later when prices are higher.

The initiative was recognised by UC Berkeley’s Center for Effective Global Action for “a commitment to evidence-based impact” and was among 12 (out of over 1800) not-for-profits and social enterprises to win the prestigious D-Prize competition. In 2021, the Taimaka Project will begin raising a third round of funding ($184,000) to scale up from 200 to 1,000 families in northeastern Nigeria, with the aim of ending seasonal food insecurity for 180,000 individuals by 2024.

Advocate General Appointment

Congratulations to Keith Stewart QC (English 1983), who has been appointed to the post of Advocate General for Scotland on 15 October 2020, and granted a life peerage, with the title of Lord Stewart of Dirleton. Keith was called to the Bar in 1993 and took silk in 2011. He specialises in criminal law, and has advised in other matters, including defamation and intellectual property.

Camino de Santiago Charity Pilgrimage

Alumnus Peter Garner (Geography 1971) walked 500 miles across Spain last year to raise funds for wounded military veterans.

Peter served as an officer in The Light Infantry after graduating. He walked the pilgrims’ Way of St James from the French Pyrenees to Santiago de Compostela for Care for Casualties, which looks after wounded veterans of his former regiment. His journey took 32 days (including his 68th birthday) through Navarre, Leon and Castile to Galicia, walking between 12 and 24 miles each day. “I hoped to raise £5,000” Peter says: “Nearly 200 people sponsored me and I actually raised £7,800.”

Alumni Crypto Terrorist Takedown

In August 2020, the US Department of Justice announced the dismantling of two terrorist financing campaigns, resulting in the largest ever seizure of cryptoassets belonging to terrorist organisations. These campaigns have previously been identified and reported by Elliptic, a company founded by two Keble alumni, Dr Tom Robinson (BA, DPhil Physics 1999) and Dr James Smith (DPhil Computer Science 2006).

The two terrorist groups, al-Quassam Brigades and al-Qaeda, used mostly social media to solicit donations in bitcoin before laundering the money through crypto exchange services. Back in April 2019, Elliptic had already traced bitcoins from a Hamas terrorist financing campaign and, by using network analysis, they were able to map out the network of fund movements, ultimately assisting the authorities to dismantle these campaigns.

Elliptic’s cryptoasset compliance software is now used by hundreds of businesses around the world, including major banks and asset managers, and is helping to drive mainstream adoption of this new asset class.

Shared Rooms: Pusey 3007

Helen Gregson
(Mathematics 1981)

My best memory from my Keble room is captured in this photograph of my father in the room during one of his many visits to take me home at the end of term. Dad drove down from Blackpool in a van, converted into a camper by adding a fold-up bed, gas stove and kettle! He so enjoyed these visits and the wonderful Keble welcome, which was as genuine then as it is now. Dad’s enjoyment of Keble continued into later years when his World War II veterans’ group held a memorial reunion in the Chapel and Hall and he and I were able, once again, to enjoy time in Keble together. Precious memories indeed!

Joseph Gale
(Geography 2018)

Room P3007 has not given me one standout memory, but the general atmosphere in the room was one that filled me with calm and luxury. Sunk inside the redbrick structure, this grand room was sandwiched in the middle of the corridor but, once inside, the room could have been set in any 5-star hotel.

The feeling of gratitude was strongest when opening the curtains in the morning and glancing at the hustle of the cityscape below, backgrounded by the beautiful Natural History Museum—this inspired me.
